and Isaac Salm (Colombia, b. 1977)

FutureTogether was founded in 2001 by the Salm brothers—Isaac, the numbers guy, and Jaime, the design guy—with the objective of merging business rigor with environmentally and socially progressive design. The studio comprises art installations, sculpture, furniture, creative environments and sustainable design strategy.

As the main partners of the studio, Isaac and Jaime are responsible for leading teams and working directly with clients to translate their visions into reality.

Artist Statement

Our goal with this work is to invite viewers to ponder larger questions about race, diversity, and humanity. We wanted to engage with them on their internal conversations about these topics. We aimed to achieve this by confronting them with contrast, challenging the subtle ways in which race and diversity play out in the real world.

Human Fractals

The artists created a site-specific, immersive sculpture for one of the key pathways within the new headquarters. The design is a portrait of diversity and creates a window into ourselves, while providing a space for contemplation, self-reflection, and joy. The installation is a permanent invitation to see, accept, and respect our collective differences.

Twelve different individuals with distinct features were chosen to represent the diverse global workforce of Air Products around the world. The images of each character were creatively cropped amidst architectural angles and shapes, offering the viewer an imaginative approach as the human features are slowly discovered.

The artists felt that placing a work of art about diversity in the heart of the building provides a visual reminder of the culture the company seeks to uphold. The goal of the piece was to be meditative, peaceful, and immersive. A place for reflection and self-discovery, this installation demonstrates an implicit call towards action.
